My deepest sympathy to Sedra's family. I have known her since her first year at Barnard College, when I was working at the Teachers College Bookstore. Even then she was someone who was always thinking of others: She came in after a gym class to buy cards to send to people she cared about. There were many times since then when Sedra was there for me and other friends. She went through many things in her life, but she never let that stop her from being a friend. The world is a sadder and less interesting place without Sedra Varga in it. Sincerely, Michael A. Rozza
